NAACP in human rights cases in the 1940s, 1950s, largely ignored the human rights in the courts (1), and are among the most likely to fail to do so both state-by-state and across all time (see also the chapter of human rights litigation strategy discussed in 2004).

The growing international pressure to curb human rights abuses in the Balkans has been a double-edged sword. On the one hand, it has helped to bring international attention to the plight of the victims and to the need for a comprehensive investigation. On the other hand, it has also led to a number of problems, including the politicization of the investigation and the lack of cooperation from the local authorities.

SENATORS' break from jueteng, the illegal gambling game, has been a welcome relief to many of them, especially those who have been involved in the game for a long time. The break has allowed them to focus on their legislative duties and to spend more time with their families. ## Reds open door for talks to resume

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) has ruled that the Communist Party (CP) must open its doors to negotiations with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America (UBA).

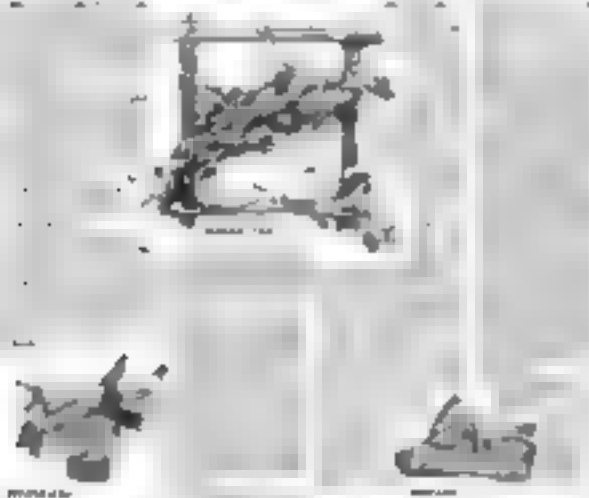

The NLRB's decision, issued in a 3-2 vote, is a landmark ruling in the long-running dispute between the CP and the UBA. The CP had refused to negotiate with the UBA for years, claiming that the union was a front for the CP.

The NLRB's decision is based on the National Labor Relations Act, which requires employers to negotiate with unions. The CP is considered an employer in this case because it controls the UBA's activities.

The UBA has been fighting the CP for decades. It has filed numerous complaints with the NLRB, but the CP has always refused to negotiate. The NLRB's decision is a victory for the UBA and a blow to the CP.

The CP has said it will appeal the decision. It has also said it will continue to refuse to negotiate with the UBA.

Figure 1 is a flowchart illustrating the experimental design. It starts with a box labeled '1000' representing the initial number of subjects. An arrow points down to a box labeled '500' representing the number of subjects in each of the two randomly assigned groups. From there, the flow continues through several stages: 'Pre-test' (1000 subjects), 'Training' (500 subjects), 'Post-test' (500 subjects), 'Follow-up' (500 subjects), and finally 'Final test' (500 subjects). The flow is indicated by a series of downward and rightward arrows.

The diagram illustrates the experimental setup for measuring the rate of reaction. It consists of a reaction vessel (a beaker or flask) containing a solution of a reactant. A stirrer is used to mix the solution, and a thermometer is placed in the solution to monitor its temperature. The reaction vessel is connected to a gas collection system. This system includes a gas syringe, which is used to measure the volume of gas produced during the reaction. The gas syringe is connected to the reaction vessel via a delivery tube. The gas syringe is placed in a water trough, which is used to collect the gas. The gas is displaced from the water, and the volume of gas collected is measured. The diagram is labeled with various components and their functions, such as 'Reaction vessel', 'Stirrer', 'Thermometer', 'Gas syringe', and 'Water trough'.
